Provenance Abbreviations

The list presented here, though not complete will hopefully serve as a useful guide to Provenance abbreviations found in the literature of Diatoms.

The purpose of the list is not to give a specific publication for each reference but to serve as a guide to the probable author being cited.

Authority and provenance names have always been used when referring to a particular species of diatom. The main reason for this is to allow the diatomist to refer back to the author being cited to facilitate identification..

Over the years various species have been re-classified, re-named and re-described by subsequent diatomists, the result being that without references it would be impossible to verify a particular species, variation or form.

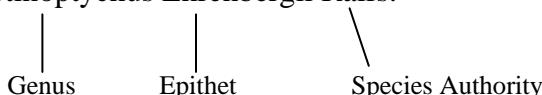

It is the norm when specifying a species to include references to the author of the work used to determine the species.

Where a form has been re-described etc., it is usual to include the original author in brackets and to follow this with the reference to the author you are using to identify the species, though the original author in brackets may come after the current author. It is unusual to include more than two levels of reference despite the fact that the species or whatever may have been classified many times.

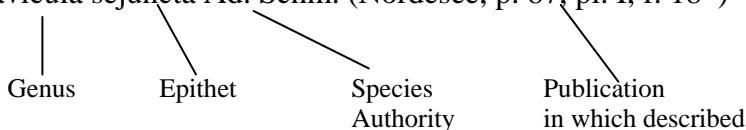

Some authors also include the authority of the genus though this is less common.

The examples below will help you understand the possible structures.

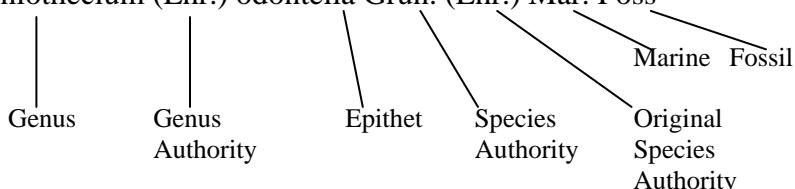

Actinoptychus Ehrenbergii Ralfs.

Navicula sejuncta Ad. Schm. (Nordesee, p. 87, pl. I, f. 18)*

Goniothecium (Ehr.) odontella Grun. (Ehr.) Mar. Foss

2.

In the past there appear to have been few standards as regards abbreviations and authors have used pretty much what they felt like at the time, even to the degree of inconsistencies within the same publication. This, unless they provide a key, makes life a little difficult sometimes unless they also provide a reference to the work.

Though the list in the following pages contains references to works, they should not be assumed to be the work being referenced by any particular author. They are included to give an indication of the period the cited author was active.

Ag. Agard. Agardh.	C. A. Agardh (1785-1859) or J. G. Agardh (1813-1901) Professor Carl Adolph Agardh 1785-1859. Swedish botanist. He was also known as a Mathematician, an Economist and politician, being a member of the parliament from 1817. In this latter position he was inclined to be impulsive, his actions being guided by his ideals rather than allegiance to any political doctrine. He was also a clergyman being designated Bishop of Karlstad in 1835. He was also a member of the Swedish Academy. He was educated at the University of Lund where he studied Algae. Jacob George Agardh (1813-1901) was also an algologist who was, in turn, appointed Professor of Botany at Lund from 1854. His central work was 'Species, Genera et Ordines Algarum' published between 1848 and 1901 in a three volume series. He followed his father into politics, with an interest in Economics, and joined the Swedish Parliament in the 1862/63 session.

Cl. Cleve.	Per Teodor Cleve (1840-1905). Swedish Chemist. Gained a PhD. In Uppsala in 1863. Professor at the same institution from 1874, when his main areas of study were Hydrography and Plankton Stratigraphy, with a special interest in the Diatomaceae. Because of his work in Platinum Chemistry his students nicknamed him PtCl4. By all accounts he was a good teacher but could be caustic in his commentary. His daughter Astrid Maria Cleve von Euler, 1875-1968 also gained a PhD at Uppsala (1898), was a well known Diatomist and also a doctor, pioneering womens acceptance into this profession.
