

Litonotus

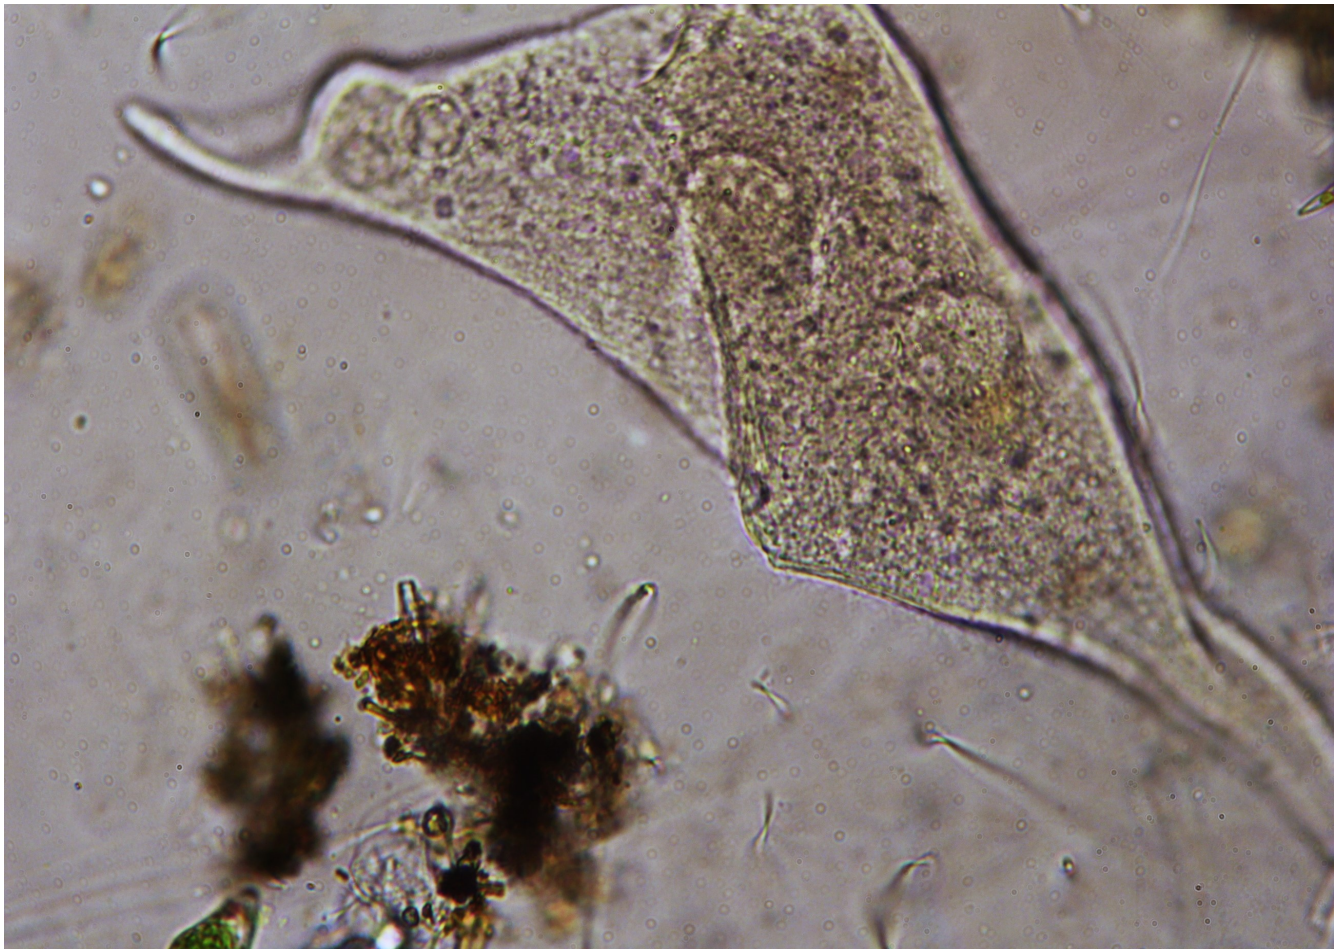

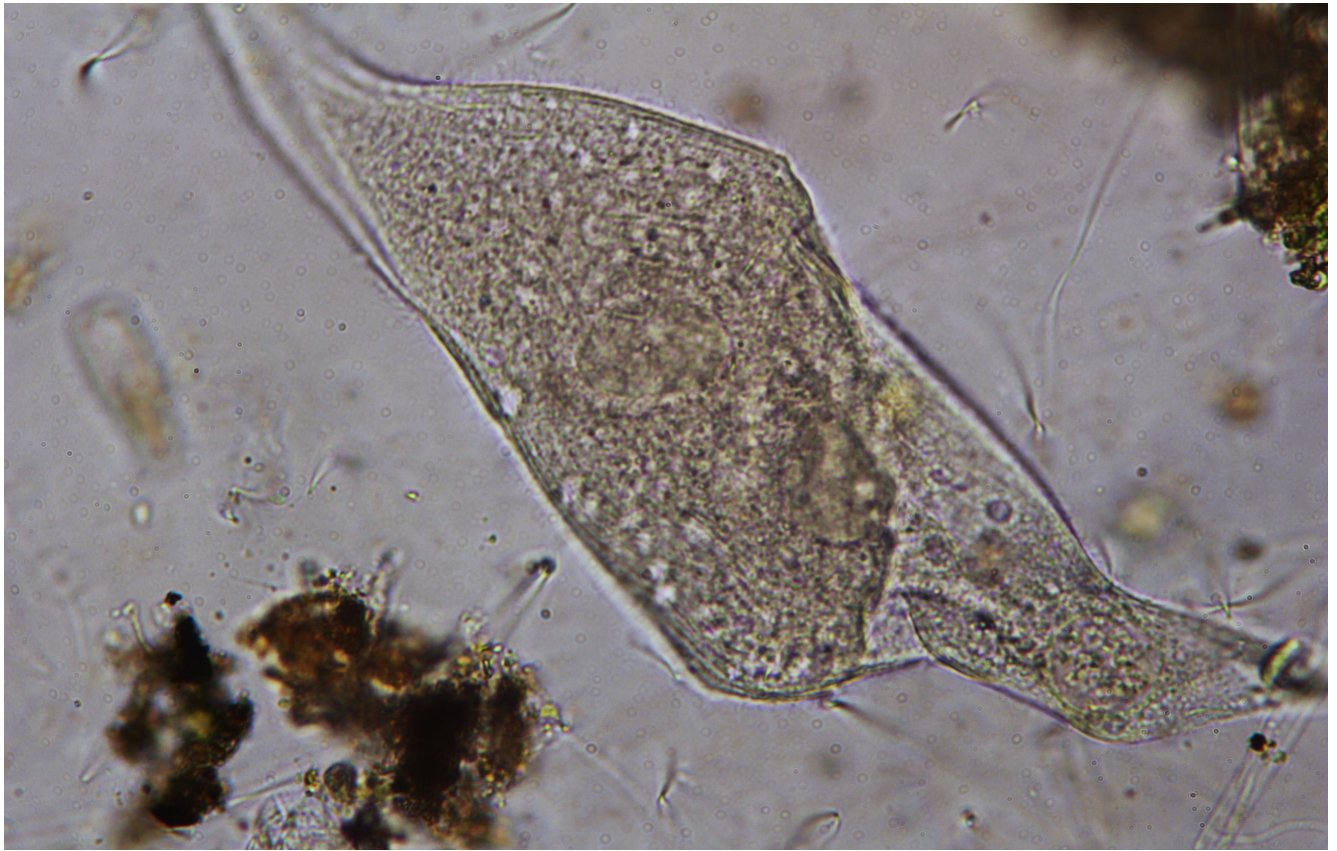

Robert McCallum

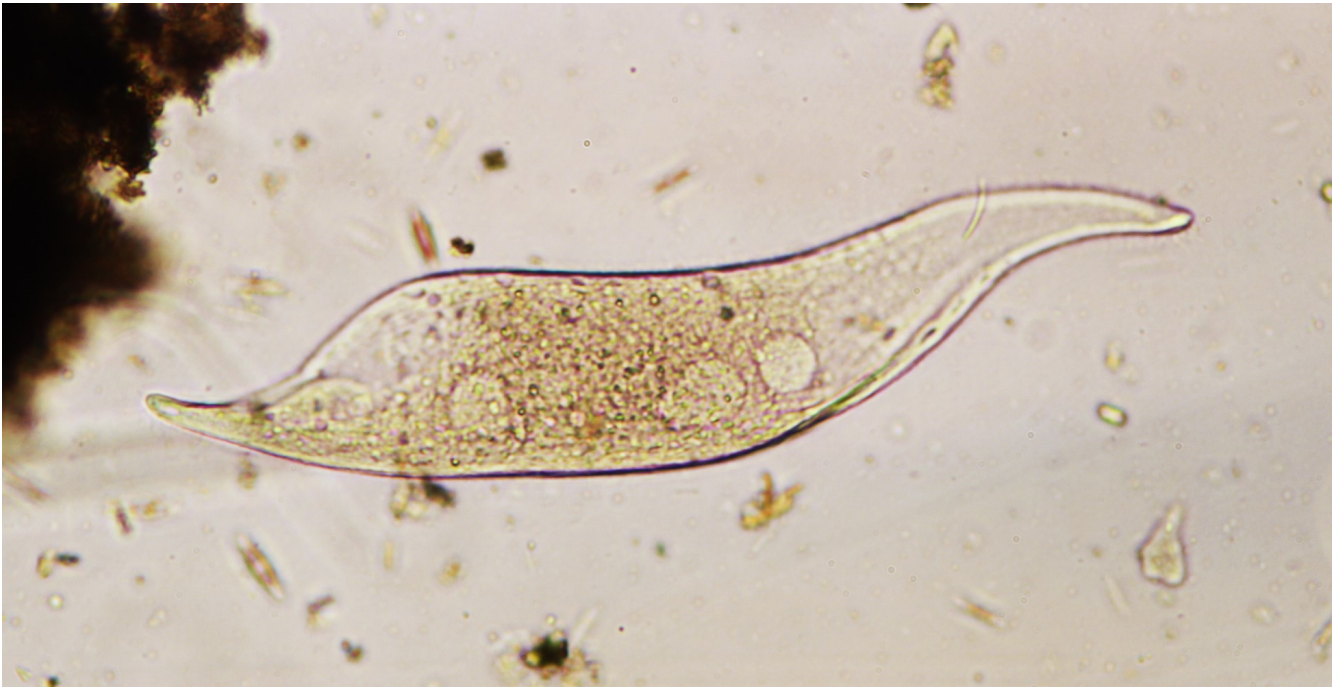

Ontario, Canada

My favourite specimens to observe under the microscope are Ciliate protozoans. There are countless forms and varieties of ciliates. Some can be large and a few are colourful.

Members of the Litonotus genus are described as a flattened ciliate with two round macroneuclei and a single microneucleus.

Comments to the author welcomed, email –
robert.mccallum1957 AT hotmail DOT com

Published in the December 2024 issue of Micscape magazine.